epochs, has been counted an evidence of particular price and honorable refinement.

The present new medal of Henry Clay, as a work of art, is at least equal to any work of the kind that could have been produced in any country, and probably in any age. The likeness of Mr. Clay, on the obverse side, is from a recent model from life, and executed by an artist of unequaled eminence, whose qualifications for this particular task have been matured by repeatedly performing it in other medals of the same illustrious person, designed for personal presentation; and the likeness is accordingly gromonaced by all competent judges to be the most securate in every lineament, and the most characteristically expressive of any that has been made of Mr. Clay, in any form. On the reverse side is an appropriate design, in bold relief, illustrative of the patiotic basis of his political character. The medal is three inches in diameter, in the finest bronze, and inclosed in a handsom morocco case.

No similar work of art has ever been submitted to the general patronage and patrotism of the American people, and none seems better calculated to gratify and reward it.
